Lloyd C. Gardner, Noted Historian, to Discuss "The Case That Will Never Close," His New Study of the Famed Lindbergh Kidnapping, at the Spring Luncheon

LLOYD C. GARDNER
The Charles and Mary Beard Professor of History
Rutgers University-New Brunswick

Lloyd C. Gardner, author of the new book, The Case That Will Never Close, is a specialist in 20th Century foreign policy and has held several national fellowships, including two Fulbright Professorships in England and Finland, and a Guggenheim Fellowship.

His new book, The Case That Will Never Close, is a comprehensive study of the Lindbergh kidnapping, investigation, and trial, placing it in the context of the Depression, when many feared the country was on the edge of anarchy. Gardner delves deeply into aspects of the case that remain confusing to this day. These include Lindbergh's dealings with crime baron Owney Madden, Al Capone's New York counterpart, through gangland intermediaries, as well as the inexplicable exploits of John Condon, a retired school teacher who became the prosecution's chief witness.

The initial investigation was hampered by Colonel Lindbergh, who insisted that the police not attempt to find the perpetrator because he feared the investigation would endanger his son's life. He relented only when the child was found dead.

The Case That Will Never Close draws upon never-before-used FBI records that reveal the animosity between J. Edgar Hoover and Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of the New Jersey State Police.

The story is filled with incredible twists and turns that continue to fascinate people. Set in historical context, this book offers not only a compelling read, but a powerful vantage point from which to observe the United States in the 1930s, as well as contemporary arguments over capital punishment.

President McCormick Inaugurates Friends of Rutgers Organization

At the February 13 Rutgers Board of Governors meeting, President Richard L. McCormick announced the successful launch of the Friends of Rutgers (FOR), a statewide network of the Rutgers Community and others who will advocate for the university with state and federal governments and the media.

The president sent e-mails to students, faculty and alumni proclaiming and explaining the start of the organization. FOR was created for the purpose of strengthening the network of university supporters, managing public awareness campaigns about the resources needed by the University, and to spur the state government for increased funding.

Friends of Rutgers had drawn nearly 500 members within 24 hours of its launch, McCormick reported, and Richard Considine, director of Rutgers' advocacy programs, indicated that the list is now nearly 700 and growing.

Rutgers has over 300,000 living alumni and thousands of students, faculty members and friends who can change public perceptions or convince the state government to make the University a priority.

"This is a network to advocate for us in the legislative halls and elsewhere as appropriate," McCormick said. "Most of you know we made a good start last spring, significantly reducing a budget cut that had been originally proposed. This year our ambitions are higher, not only with respect to the budget but with respect to mobilizing voices for Rutgers."
Gene O’Hara, who will complete the last of his three one-year-terms as chair of the board of governors in June will receive an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree at Rutgers’ spring commencement. The board unanimously approved a resolution authorizing the degree.

The resolution which came as a surprise to him, noted that his tenure has been distinguished by “his extraordinary efforts in the university’s presidential search process and his exceptional leadership during the review of the proposed restructuring of New Jersey’s public universities.”

O’Hara earned a degree in accounting at University College-Newark in 1962. He worked for 40 years at The Prudential Insurance Company of America and rose steadily through the ranks, retiring in 1995 as chief financial officer.

O’Hara, who was appointed to the board of governors in 1994 and named chair in 2001, thanked the board. “I get great satisfaction from being able to make a small repayment on the wonderful things that this institution enabled me to do,” he said.

Seven Others to Receive Honorary Degrees

Heading the list of honorees is dancer, choreographer, singer, actor, and director Gregory Hines who will be awarded a Doctor of Fine Arts degree posthumously at Rutgers commencement exercises. Hines made his professional debut at age 5 and went on to become the greatest tap dancer of his generation. He devoted his life to teaching, helping and entertaining millions. He staged three benefit concerts at the State Theatre to support dance education in the New Brunswick Public School District and in 1999, he established the Gregory Hines DancePower Endowed Scholarship at Rutgers, which helps New Brunswick High School graduates who are DancePower participants attend the university.

Leading Cancer Researcher New VP for Academic Affairs

Dr. Philip Furmanski, one of the nation’s leading researchers in cancer cell biology and an accomplished administrator, was named executive vice president for academic affairs - the university’s chief academic and budget officer and the number two position within the administration.

Furmanowski comes to Rutgers from New York University where he was chair of the department of biology since 1990 and professor of pathology at New York University School of Medicine. He served as dean of NYU’s Faculty of Arts and Sciences from 1995 to 1998.

He holds a bachelor’s degree in biology and chemistry and a doctoral degree in microbiology from Temple University.

He began his career at Albert Einstein Medical Center and has held research positions at Temple University Medical School, Dartmouth Medical School, Michigan Cancer Foundation and AMC Cancer Research Center. He has taught at the medical schools of Dartmouth, Wayne State University and the University of Colorado.

Furmanowski is responsible for setting university priorities and enhancing Rutgers’ academic quality. A critical area of his new role centers on promoting research and instructional collaborations among the three research universities as well as with nonprofit and private organizations. He will also define emerging instructional, research and outreach opportunities and develop new initiatives. He will also oversee faculty appointments and promotions as well as the performance and accountability of teaching, research and outreach programs.

Furmanowski noted that undergraduate education will be one of the principal areas of focus over the next year. President McCormick and he will launch a comprehensive examination of undergraduate education, beginning on the New Brunswick Campus, under the rubric of the Initiative on Undergraduate Learning and Life.

There are three facets to this initiative: the first is student affairs. The second relates to student services aimed at generating a more service-oriented, user friendly spirit throughout all campuses. The third component is a comprehensive and global assessment of undergraduate education through the establishment of a task force consisting of faculty, students and staff charged to examine all aspects of our undergraduate programs and make recommendations for improving them and ensuring that undergraduate learning and life remain a topic of ongoing discussion at the university.

“Making certain that programs remain vital, energetic and properly organized, as well as responsive to our changing needs, shifting global environment and reflecting changes in our students requires constant re-examination and renewal,” he emphasized.
Rutgers Nate Jones Scores Again

Nate Jones, a defensive standout and one of the greatest kick returners in Scarlet Knight history (100-yard kickoff returns for TDs at Tennessee and Syracuse), is just as outstanding in the classroom.

The senior, an academic All-American, received an $18,000 post-graduate scholarship as one of eight Division I-A members named to College Football's 2003 National Scholar-Athlete Class by the National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame.

Coach Greg Schiano says of his star, "There is no question that Nate Jones is a competitor and an achiever, He is a great role model for the rest of our football team. He is a very dedicated young man and a perfect example of what it takes to be a successful student-athlete."

Rutgers-Newark Senior Standout Domini Lanzone Sizzles on Volleyball Court

After suffering a season-ending injury in 2002, Domini Lanzone led the Rutgers-Newark Scarlet Raiders to a first-place finish this past fall in the New Jersey Athletic Conference (NJAC), winning the league's post-season tournament and earning its first-ever NCAA tournament berth.

The 6'1" native of River Edge, led the team to a 25-9 record, including nine consecutive wins, while scoring more than a third of the points per game. She became only the 21st player in NCAA history to score more than 2,000 career "kills," ending the season with a total of 2,217. Over her four years, she averaged 5.5 kills and 3.5 digs per game and was named each year to the NJAC first team. She began her career as NJAC Women's Volleyball Rookie of the Year and ended it as the conference's Player of the Year.

Rutgers Crew Completes Standout 2003 Season

The varsity heavyweight eight, under the direction of head coach Steve "Pops" Wagner had a great season. They made the Grand Final of the EARC Sprint Championships for the first time since 1981, beating fourth-seated Cornell by inches in a very spirited race.

Rutgers then raced to the semifinal of the International Rowing Association Championships held in Camden, N.J.

In June, 2003, Rutgers received an invitation to the Royal Henley Regatta, the most prestigious and oldest rowing competition in the world, held in Henley-On-Thames, England.

"The Henley Regatta is the center of the rowing world," said head coach Steve Wagner, "It is the oldest event of its type and really brings the top club and school teams from around the world together. It is quite a feather in our cap to participate and, of course, to have done so well.

The Henley format for racing involves two boats competing at a time, with the winner moving on to the next round. Rutgers won their first race against Harvard but lost the next round to Princeton, which went on to win the event.

On the distaff side the Rutgers 8 was selected to race for the Ladies Challenge Plate for elite university or college eight-oared crews. Crews from England, Australia, Germany and the U.S. made up the field of eight. The U.S. representatives were Dartmouth, the University of Washington and Rutgers. Rutgers drew Dartmouth in the first round and won by 1/lengths in a time of 6:28.

In the next round Rutgers faced the seeded and heavily favored hometown crew from the Leander Boat Club. Rutgers again got the better start and moved out impressively to an open water lead half way through the race, was never headed, and won by 1/lengths in a time of 6:27.

The University of Washington moved through its side of the draw to produce an All-American final. Running even for the first quarter mile, Washington pushed solidly into the lead to win the event.

Despite the loss in the finals, it was an amazing experience for the Rutgers crew - one they likely won't forget any time soon.

SCARLET HIGHLIGHTS

Former Rutgers standout Pete Zuccollilo fulfilled his lifelong dream of becoming a major league baseball player when he was called up by the Milwaukee Brewers in September of the 2003 season and is currently participating in spring training.

David DeJesus, a former teammate, was also promoted to Kansas City after a strong showing at Class AA Wichita and AAA Omaha and is a likely candidate to start the 2004 season in the major leagues.

The first phase of the Hale Center expansion at the stadium site is complete and the Rutgers football team is already reaping the rewards of a state-of-the-art athletic training room.

Former defensive lineman, and longtime NFL offensive lineman Harry Swayne, along with one of the football program's most ardent supporters, Richard Hale, are the newest inductees into the Rutgers Football Hall of Fame.

Swayne, a stellar defensive lineman for the Scarlet, made his mark in the pros as an offensive lineman, capturing three SuperBowl rings during his career.

Hale, a 1944 graduate of Rutgers, is a long-time supporter of Rutgers athletics. The building bearing his name houses the football locker rooms, athletic training room, coaches offices and strength and conditioning facilities. One of the university's major benefactors, he is currently an advisor to University President.
Silver Knights Mourn Loss of President Gene Young

It is with a heavy heart that we inform Silver Knights members across the country of the death of our president.

Eugene P. Young, who died Sunday, October 12, 2003 at the age of 72 not only was a wonderful president, but was an extraordinary human being-one who will be missed very much.

He was born in Perth Amboy on September 27, 1931 and graduated from Perth Amboy High School in 1950. He went on to Rutgers University where he earned a bachelor's degree in psychology in 1954. He then served as a lieutenant in the U.S. Army from 1955 to 1957 as an infantry and recruiting officer at Fort Carson, Colorado.

In 1961 he returned home, married his bride Marcelln, and completed his master of education degree in guidance and personnel from Rutgers in 1963.

Gene began working for Rutgers University in the personnel office in 1958 and became the scheduling officer in 1962. He served as associate vice president for Academic Affairs in 1977 and associate vice president for computer and information services in 1978 until his retirement in 1991 after 33 years of service to Rutgers.

Gene was one of the founding members of the Silver Knights, serving as president since its organization. His dedication to the university continued as an active participant in fund raising for the Alumni Association and the Rutgers University Libraries.

The Highland Park resident served his community, as a Borough Council and school board member, and was active in environmental, education and library activities. He joined the Highland Park Environmental Commission in 1975 and served as its chair. He was also a member of the Planning Board, Shade Tree Advisory Committee, Chamber of Commerce, Cable Television Advisory Committee, and Friends of the Highland Park Library. For all his energy and enthusiasm, he was awarded the "Volunteer of the Year" award in 1998.

Gene will always be remembered for "trying to improve the ways people think and act about education, the environment and our relations with one another."

He is survived by his loving wife of 42 years, Marcelln A. Burns Young; a daughter, Paula Maas and her husband Estevan; a son, Tom Young and his wife Donna Marie, and three grandchildren, Sarah and Katie Maas and Joseph Young.

Paul Vitek Assumes Duties as President

Silver Knights 1st vice president, Paul Vitek, in accordance with the association’s by-laws, has assumed the presidency for the duration of the term which expires with the forthcoming election to take place at the 2004 Fall Luncheon Meeting.

Paul, born and raised in Lansford, Pennsylvania, is a graduate of Columbia University. He began his professional career in publishing with the McGraw-Hill Book Company in New York and following a stint as corporate director of advertising-promotion at D. Van Nostrand Publishing Company, Princeton, he joined the Rutgers University Press in 1969 as director of advertising-promotion. In 1980 he was called upon to join Rutgers’ Division of Intercollegiate Athletics as assistant director for student-athlete services, serving as liaison to admissions and financial aid. He also administered the 30-sport scholarship program and developed a model academic support program for athletes.

He served on the executive board of the National Association of Academic Advisors for Athletics. Vitek then became associate director of athletics and NCAA compliance officer, responsible for the interpretation, education, review and administration of NCAA rules and regulations.

He retired in 1993 and makes his home in Manasquan on the shore.

State’s Pension Funds Recovery Boosted

State employees and retirees will be pleased to learn that the state’s pension funds recorded a 21 percent return on investment in 2003, reversing a stretch of more than two years in which it had lost billions of dollars.

The increase was due to the improving stock market and a decision to invest heavily in European stocks, according to a report issued by the State Investment Council. That boosted the value of the state’s holdings by about $9 billion to $67 billion - about the value they held two years ago.

The funds value had fallen sharply since August 2000, mostly due to the sour economy and increases in retirement benefits. The increase also could help ease the burden on taxpayers because it would help offset payments the state must make to the funds.
University’s Master Plan: A Framework for Growth

As Rutgers heads into the 21st century, the board of governors approved the university’s 2003 physical master plan to help guide its steps through the year 2011. The 115-page master plan is a conceptual outline of controlled University development that will create a coherent array of facilities that can support learning across all dimensions of life within the university community.

In 2001, Paulien & Associates of Denver, a consulting firm specializing in campus planning was retained to conduct a detailed analysis of Rutgers’ current and future space needs. Ayers/Saint/Gross of Baltimore, an architectural and planning firm that works primarily with colleges and universities then prepared the actual master plan.

The university community was heavily involved in the development process. Faculty committees, student committees, senior administrators and deans on each campus provided input. In addition, the president’s cabinet and a committee comprised of representatives from each campus monitored the plan’s progress. The master plan recommends a host of new academic facilities, housing units, parking facilities, administrative and athletic buildings, support structures and landscape improvements to enable the university to more efficiently serve its many constituents.

To address the university’s needs up to 2012 to accommodate the 9,000 additional students, Kyu Jung Whang, the project manager and vice president for facilities and capital planning, estimates the cost to be in the $1-to-$2 billion range.

To help offset capital costs, the plan encourages the formation of public-private partnerships to build multi-use facilities. Other sources of income include federal and state funds, public and private donations and more.

In Camden the master plan envisions a new business school, a major addition to the law school and new residence halls for undergraduate students, among other capital improvements.

One of Newark’s greatest challenges will be to expand its range of developing and financing partnerships to construct mixed-use housing, expanding the Life Sciences Building, the Paul Robeson Center, the Dana Library and providing additional space for the Rutgers business school. This would enable the university to concentrate its resources on land for academic facilities.

For the New Brunswick-Piscataway campus the plan recommends new buildings and landscaping on the College Avenue campus, the narrowing of College Avenue, perhaps turning it into a pedestrian thoroughfare. On the Busch campus it proposes developing parking and transportation plans to serve the campus and commuters, including a bus-lane-light rail corridor. Recommendations for improving the student center and dining facilities, creating faculty-staff graduate housing options in a new “College Town,” and building retail and entertainment activities are slated for the Livingston campus.

Earmarked for the Cook-Douglass campus is the creation of a new academic quad at the end of College Farm Road, improving Nichol Avenue with new buildings and increased entry points as well as improving the network of roads and constructing parking garages.

The master plan is not just an academic study. It is a dynamic entity that should be reviewed periodically and updated every seven years or so. “The master plan should not be taken as a fixed and specific proposal,” said Philip Furmanski, executive vice president for academic affairs, “It is a framework that guides you to do things in a planned way. It prevents you from putting a building in a place that you will later regret.”

Silver Knights Mark Launch of Homecoming Participation

On October 18, 2003, the Silver Knights participated in the "Homecoming Village" to show support and to actively integrate the organization into the life of the university community. It also provided the opportunity to disseminate information to the general public about the organization.

This was the first time the Silver Knights as a group took part in Homecoming. The Rutgers Alumni Association, the sponsor of Homecoming, guided the Silver Knights, provided the tent, tables and chairs and assisted in making it an extremely successful event.

In concert with our participation the Division of Intercollegiate Athletics made available specially discounted football tickets to dues-paying members and sold 128 tickets for the Rutgers-Pittsburgh gridiron battle.

Silver Knights decorated the tent highlighted by its new banner and various displays in keeping with the theme of Homecoming 2003 -- Celebrating R Traditions. Included were copies of the first diplomas issued by Rutgers, various sports memorabilia, pennants, photos and maps of different areas and times, plus old documents from the university archives. A few give-away items were distributed, among which was the Illustra coffee table book.

The Silver Knights also sponsored a barbershop quartet that sang at the tent and performed throughout the Homecoming Village as wandering troubadours.

The Staff Retirees Association was honored by President Richard L. McCormick who began his visit to the Homecoming Village by first stopping by its tent and congratulating the Silver Knights on their participation. A good number of Rutgers staff, faculty, alumni and friends of Rutgers visited the tent, and many more people in the university community are now aware of the Silver Knights organization.

Co-chairs Bill Callahan and Zarine Doitiva, the Homecoming Committee and Silver Knights volunteers manning the tent are to be commended for their efforts and the success of the day. Plans are now being formulated for the Silver Knights participation in the Homecoming 2004 celebration. Anyone who would like to work on this special event can contact any member of the Executive Committee. Check the Silver Knights web site for more information by going to http://silverknights.rutgers.edu. You may want to bookmark the page so you can visit it frequently.

First of Flip Wilson Scholarships Awarded

A new scholarship for students majoring in journalism was awarded this academic year thanks to a gift from Flip Wilson, the award-winning comedian of Jersey City who died of liver cancer in 1998.

Rutgers was selected because it offers the leading journalism program in its home state noted Kathleen Fearn-Banks, a longtime friend of Wilson's.

The first recipients of the scholarship, created to increase diversity in the newsroom, are Janine Brown of Jersey City and Marguerite Estephan of Easton, Pa. Both are journalism and media studies majors and will share the $25,000 aid that will help defray the cost of tuition, fees, room and board, and textbooks.

Brown, who attends Douglass College, is a reporter for the student radio station WRSU-FM. She completed a journalism internship at The Jersey Journal and was a production assistant for WABC-TV in New York. Estephan, a Rutgers College dean's list student, is a segment producer for "Inside Rutgers" on the student-run television network, RU-TV, who also interned at ABC News Productions in New York.
Silver Knights to Visit Historic Cape May

Looking forward to the sunny summer days? Then mark your calendar with the date - Wednesday, June 2, 2004 when members of the Silver Knights, family and friends are invited on a bus trip to historic Cape May.

Our first stop will be for lunch at the beautiful Washington Inn where two menu choices are available:

1. Mr. Taylor’s Chicken: Sauteed chicken topped with spinach, onion, and blue cheese

A house salad with light mustard vinaigrette, fresh seasonal vegetables, rice or potato where applicable, country bread and butter, coffee, hot or iced tea, and a dessert of Mousse du Jour with fresh berries are also included.

After lunch we will tour the historic landmark city of Cape May and the Physick House. We may even be able to plan a short visit to a shopping mall, historic of course.

The total cost is $60.00 per person.

The bus will depart from the Cook Campus [Lot # 98B] at 9:00 am and return approximately 8:00 pm.

If you are interested, please sign up early, complete the form below and return it with your check today. We look forward to having you, your family and friends join us.
